British human rights activist Kevin Healey, appointed new IHRF's High Representative for Autism

NEW YORK CITY (03/19/2022) The International Human Rights Foundation bets on Mr. Kevin Healey as IHRF's representative in United Kingdom due to his background in activism for human rights, specially, in relation to his work for the rights and dignity of people with autism.

As part of civil society, the International Human Rights Foundation is a non-governmental, secular, diverse, non-violent, feminist, independent of creeds, parties and companies, international and non-profit institution, dedicated to the dissemination of the ideas, principles and values contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, the Yogyakarta Principles, the Ruggie Principles and concordant texts.

"Commitment and mutual trust, combined with our admiration for his years of work on behalf of those most in need, are the hallmarks of Mr. Kevin Healey's appointment as the new High Representative of the International Human Rights Foundation for Autism related matters", remark María Claudia Cambi, President of the Board of Trustees, in the formal welcome statement. ■
